PREFACE

At the 2009 Canal Family Reunion event in Williamsport, MD, Mr. Ebersole asked me if I was interested in writing a history of his wife's family, the Sterling's. Once I confirmed that he was talking about the Sterling family from Dam No. 5 on the canal, I said that I was interested. I told him about the things I needed to get started and we went our separate ways. During the subsequent year we met a various Association events and he would assure me that he was working on collecting the basic information.

At the 2010 Canal Family Reunion event in Williamsport, MD, Mr. Ebersole gave me an envelope of containing his notes of the family history and other information; then he introduced me to John Sterling, who in turn introduced me to Jayne Sterling. John and I met and then went to Jayne Sterling's house where she had a lot of historical family information ready for me.

One of the instrumental pieces of information provided by Mr. Ebersole was a 20 pages listing the descendants of Samuel Sterling and 4 pages listing the descendants of Wilber Lee Sterling. Those two listings form the basis for the Table of Sterling Family Statistics at the back of this report. The reports also included notes about the family members; the notes have been included in this history.

The following story places heavy reliance on the family notes written by Mr. Ebersole and was supplemented with the information provided by John Sterling, Jayne Sterling and what I could find. We hope it is interesting reading.

In 2015 Melody Sterling contacted the author regarding her Sterling ancestors. Based on her research, Appendix A was revised as shown to include two earlier generations and her ancestors. Readers are encouraged to contact the author with additions and corrections. There are still some dates missing and nothing about the William Sterling (b. 12/22/1827) branch of the family.

Chapter 1. Early Years - Until 1888 - The Independent Operating Period of the C. & O. Canal

On Oct. 20, 1804 William Sterling co-signed a Supervisors Bond for the road from Williamsport to Booth's Mill. On April 15, 1822 Joseph Weltz, in consideration of $500, sold the unexpired term or lease of Lot 111 in Williamsport to Abraham Sterling. On July 22, 1824 Edward G. Williams, in consideration of $36, sold the house, out house, building, improvements and advantages on Lot 111 in Williamsport to Abraham Sterling. It appears that this William Sterling and Abraham Sterling were brothers; and they had two sisters whose lives remain to be developed.

Samuel Sterling was born in Williamsport, Maryland on July 13, 1810 to William and Margaret Adkinson Sterling. There is no evidence that Samuel ever worked on the canal or for the Canal Company. But we do know that in 1833 he purchased from William Sterling six negroes, seven horses, four cows, a steer, two bulls, two heifers, three sows and thirty one shoats, a farm wagon, four sets of wagon gear and five ploughs. So he was farming in Washington County when the Canal was under construction in the 1830's.

On Saturday, March 8, 1837, the Reverend D. Miller married Mr. Samuel Sterling to Miss Ellen Elizabeth Williams, both of Washington County. Then on March 26, 1838 in consideration of $22.62, Kinsey Sparrow sold to Samuel Sterling household goods and furniture sufficient to set up housekeeping. Apparently Samuel Sterling had an affair with Amelia Monninger on or about January 1837 which resulted in a male illegitimate child on September 16, 1837. In consideration of $5.00 and two negro slaves from Samuel Sterling, Abraham Sterling indemnified Washington County from all charges that might arise in the maintenance of the male illegitimate child.

The 1850 census reported that Samuel Sterling, age 39, Farmer was living in Washington County, Md. Subdivision No. 2. Living with him were: Ellen, age 32, wife; John, age 12, son; Margaret E., age 10, daughter; George, age 8, son; Samuel, age 6, son; Henrietta, age 5, daughter; Henry, age 4, son; [Mary] Catherine, age 3, daughter; and Benjamin, age 1, son. All were born in Maryland and the three oldest children had attended school within the past year.

Samuel and Ellen Sterling's oldest daughter Margaret married John W. Snyder on March 27, 1855.

By 1860 the Samuel Sterling family was living in Clear Spring District of Maryland and Samuel served on the Grand Jury for the March Term of the Washington County Circuit Court, for which service he was paid $34.00. The census of that year does not list an occupation for any member of the family. Samuel was reported as 50 years old, Ellen as 45, John [W.] as 22, George as 19, Samuel as 18, Henrietta as 16, Henry as 14, Mary as 13, Benjamin as 10, Daniel as 9, and Joseph as 7 years old. With eleven in the household, someone must have been employed. Samuel's personal estate was valued at $100.

The 1860 census reported William Sterling, age 31, Journeyman Saddler, with real estate valued at $300 and a personal estate valued at $30, living in Williamsport. Living with him were: Matilda, age 24, wife; and John [W.], age 5, son. Living in the same dwelling but a separate family was Catherine Sterling, age 60, with real estate valued at $400 and a personal estate valued at $30 [she would be William Sterling's step-mother]; William Sterling, age 34, Journeyman Saddler; and John [F.] Sterling, age 23, Boatman.

The Civil War began on April 12, 1861. There was considerable political unrest in the Nation, State and County. The Grand Union Party held a Mass Meeting on Tuesday, Sep. 24th 1861, in Hagerstown, Md. The Central Committee reported Samuel Sterling, and others, as members to the County Convention. Samuel Sterling's subsequent political activities remain to be documented.

The C & O Canal was a boundary between the two opposing forces and the war came to the Clear Spring District on December 7-9, 1861; the Confederates were on the south side of the Potomac River near Dam No. 5 and the 13th Massachusetts Infantry regiment was sent from Williamsport to defend the canal. The engagement was documented as follows:

"Confederate canister and shells continued their routine from the day before, but this time the Federal reply was a bit livelier. As soon as their gunners detected the direction of the returned fire, they simply elevated their guns with good effect. Their second shell crashed into a large barn owned by farmer John Sterling, at Two Locks, where boats were launched into the river. It immediately caught fire and burned to the ground, scattering the troops using it as shelter.

"This occurred moments after several of the Massachusetts troops had awakened from a nap in the Sterling barn's hay bin. Shaken, they assisted farmer Sterling in getting his livestock out of the flaming building, but could not save the entire crop of grain. "The Denton Jacques' barn survived a blast that went smashing through it and exploded on the other side. "Captain Robinson sent another squad of six men to the river armed with the famous Enfield rifle, a sound the Rebels seemed to fear. They reported seeing three of four fall with their first volley. At 9:00 a.m. all guns became silent.

"During the lull a woman, paddling a small boat, crossed over from the Virginia side, and reported four dead and seven or eight more wounded. Only one was injured on the Maryland side in the last exchange. At 4:00 p.m., the guns opened fire again and this time they seemed to be aimed at the Sterling house, a short distance from the gutted barn. They stopped after several salvos kicked up only dirt and rocks."

We are quite certain this John W. Sterling did not enlist in Civil War. He had removed to Lexington, Washington County, Iowa, met and married Mary Elizabeth Bear and they had their first child, William Sterling, in 1862, after the Civil War had started. Their second child, Rhea Sterling, arrived in 1864, while the Civil War was still ongoing.

George M. Sterling enlisted as a private in Company I, 1st Regiment, 1st Maryland Cavalry, at Williamsport, Md. on Oct. 13, 1862, for a period of 3 years. He was 21 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, fair complexion, gray eyes, brown hair, born in Washington County, Md. and he was a farmer. He was placed on detached service until the official muster-in date of Dec. 17, 1862. The 1st Regiment, Maryland Cavalry was organized at Baltimore and Williamsport, Md. Pittsburg, Pa., and Washington, D.C., August 1861 to June 1862. Companies "H" and "I" were organized in Washington and Allegheny Counties. The Regiment was involved in skirmishes throughout Northern Virginia and the following: Battle of Bull Run, Aug. 30 1862; Battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 12 - 15, 1862; Battle of Gettysburg, July 1 - 3, 1863; Battle of Chaffin's Farm, Sep. 28 - 30, 1864; and the surrender of General Lee and his army at Appomattox Court House.

The Company Muster Roll lists George M. Sterling as present until Aug. 12, 1864. His pay had been deducted $1.01 for loss of a curry comb and brush during May or June, 1864. The Regiment had been at New Market Heights, July 27 - 28 and proceeded to Strawberry Plains, north of the James River arriving at Flusser's Mill on Aug. 14. He was wounded and spent Sep. and Oct. 1864 at the U. S. A. General Hospital, Fort Monroe, Va. He returned to the Regiment for Nov. & Dec. 1864. During Jan. & Feb. 1865 he was absent on detached duty. He returned to duty and was wounded again at Appomattox Court House, April 9, 1865; which was just days before General Lee surrendered. He was transported to Jarvis U. S. A. General Hospital, Baltimore, Md. where he was discharged for disability on June 11, 1865. On the Company Muster-out Roll, Richmond, VA., dated Aug. 1865, George M. Sterling was 23 years old, joined the Co. as a private, been promoted to Corporal on Oct. 28, 1863, promoted to Sergeant Sep. 14, 1864, and discharged June 11, 1865 from Jarvis U. S. A. Hospital, Baltimore, Md., for disability. His Certificate of Disability for Discharge, dated June 28, 1865, states he suffered a gunshot wound to the right knee joint.

Samuel B. Sterling enlisted as a private in Company H, 6th Regiment, Maryland Infantry at Hagerstown, Md. on Aug. 20, 1862, for a period of 3 years. He was 20 years old. He was placed on detached duty until the official Company Muster-in date of Sept. 5, 1862 at Baltimore, Md. The 6th Regiment, Maryland Infantry, was organized at Baltimore, Md. Aug. 12 to Sep. 3, 1862. It moved to join the Army of the Potomac in Western Maryland defending Williamsport, Md. Sep. 20 - 21, 1862. The Regiment saw duty between Williamsport and Hagerstown, Md. until Dec. 11; on Dec. 4, 1862 Samuel B. Sterling was promoted to Corporal at Williamsport. The Regiment then moved to Maryland Heights and remained there until March 28, 1863; on April 10, 1863 Samuel B. Sterling was absent, sick with leave near Clear Spring, Washington County, Md. He returned to duty for Mar. through Aug. 1863. During that time the Regiment was in Skirmishes in Northern Virginia and the Battle of Winchester, June 14 - 15. Sometime during July or August, 1863 Samuel was called before a Regimental Court Martial and fined $8.00. The Regiment continued to be involved in skirmishes and the Battle of Wilderness, May 5 - 7, 1864; Battle of Spotsylvania, May 8 - 12; Battle of Monocacy, July 9; Battle of Winchester, Sep. 19; Battle of Cedar Creek, Oct. 19 and then took up duty in Kernstown until Dec. 1864. On Nov. 12, 1864, Samuel B. Sterling deserted at Martinsburg, Va.
Samuel Sterling died on Dec. 23, 1864; presumably he was sick or incapacitated for some time prior to his death. He was subsequently buried in the Riverview Cemetery, Williamsport, Md. The left hand photograph is a view of the general area in the cemetery, with Samuel Sterling's tombstone in the lower right corner. The right hand photograph is a close up view of his headstone.

The following document was enclosed:

Clear Spring, Washington County, Maryland, May 2, 1865

Respectfully returned to H. Clay Naill, Capt. & Prov. Marshall 4th Dist. Md. with the following information "relative to the circumstances of the family of Samuel B. Sterling, Co. "H," 6th Reg't, Md. Infantry volunteers." Samuel B. Sterling is a son of the late Samuel

From the Richard F. Ebersole Collection, Hagerstown, MD, 2011.
Sterling who died Dec. 23, 1864. The family now consists of a widowed mother and eight children - five sons and three daughters. Four sons, of which Samuel B. Sterling is one - are now in the federal army. One son nearly twelve years of age and three daughters remain at home. The property belonging to the family cannot, I think, exceed in value eight hundred dollars. The family, since the death of the father has been supported mainly by contributions from the sons now in the army, aided by the liberality and charity of the landlord. The daughters and son remaining at home are not old enough to contribute much to their support. They greatly need the assistance of one of the older brothers to exercise a general supervision over the interests of the family. I believe the application that has been made to the Secretary of War for the discharge of Samuel B. Sterling from military service is just and that his assistance at home would contribute largely to the interest and welfare of his mother, sisters and brother.

I remain, Very Respectfully Yours &c.

H. F. Perry, M.D.

Samuel returned from desertion under the President's proclamation dated May 4, 1865. He returned near Washington, D. C. June 20, 1865. On July 2, 1865 he was transferred to 1st Maryland Volunteer Infantry Regiment and subsequently discharged on July 2, 1865.

The above letter states that four sons were in the federal army; they would be John W.; George M.; Samuel B. and Henry A. Sterling. We found records for the latter three sons and think the first son, John W. Sterling, had already removed to Iowa, married and started a family there. There was a record of a John W. Sterling, who enlisted as a private in Company D, Purnell Legion, Maryland Infantry, Union. However the inconsistency in dates is noted.

At the start of the Civil War, Henry A. Sterling was too young to enlist. However he did enlist as a private in Company S, 1st Regiment, Potomac Home Brigade, Maryland Cavalry at Frederick, Md. on Feb. 26, 1864, for a period of 3 years. He was 18 years old, 5 feet, 6-¾ inches tall, fair complexion, blue eyes, brown hair, born in Washington County, Md. and he was a laborer. The 1st Regiment, Maryland Cavalry, Potomac Home Brigade was organized at Frederick, Md. Aug. 10 to Nov. 27, 1861. The Regiment saw action throughout Northern Virginia and up into Pennsylvania, including Battle of Gettysburg, July 1 - 3, 1863. The Regiment re-enlisted Feb. 13, 1864, about the time Henry A. Sterling was recruited. The Company Muster Roll shows him present, except for July 27, 1864 when he was absent without leave. Then in Sept. or Oct. 1864 he lost his Enfield rifle musket for which his monthly pay was docked $22.15 until the cost was paid off; the Company Muster Roll through Jan. & Feb. 1865 show him present and making the last payment. The Regiment continued to participate in many skirmishes throughout Northern Virginia, the Winchester to Front Royal area. Henry A. Sterling was mustered out June 28, 1865 at Harpers Ferry, Va. He had not been paid since Dec. 31, 1864 and so he was paid $66.34 on his clothing account and $140.00 bounty; he owed the Sutter $2.00 for the loss of one cap pouch and 40¢ for one pick.

In 1865 Dan Sterling, age 14, and Benjamin Sterling, age 16, walked to Frederick, Md. to enlist in the Union Army, but were denied because of their ages.
During the Civil War, trespassing was a problem; so much so that 23 men ran a "Notice to Trespassers" in the newspaper, Samuel Sterling was one of the subscribers.\textsuperscript{14}

Sometime after Samuel died in 1864, Ellen obtained Letters of Administration from the Orphan's Court of Washington County on the personal estate of Samuel Sterling.\textsuperscript{15} Samuel Sterling was buried in River View Cemetery, Williamsport, Md. She subsequently moved with her three youngest sons, Benjamin, Daniel and Joseph, to Falling Waters, W. Va.

The Civil War ended on April 9, 1865.

We saw a newspaper advertisement:

The 1870 census reported that Ellen Sterling, age 55, [widowed] was living in Falling Waters, W. Va.\textsuperscript{17} Living with her were: Benjamin, age 21, her son, who was a day laborer; Daniel, age 18, her son, a day laborer; and Joseph, age 16, her son, he could read and write.

The 1870 census reported John [W.] Sterling, age 34, a farmer with a personal estate valued at $2,400, was living in Lexington, Iowa.\textsuperscript{18} Living with him were Elizabeth, age 26, wife; William, age 8, son; Rhea, age 6, daughter; Gideon, age 4, son; and Mary, age 1, daughter.

The 1870 census reported John [W.] Snyder, age 38, a Farm Laborer, living in Williamsport, Md.\textsuperscript{19} Living with him were: Margaret E. [Sterling], age 30, wife; Samuel, age 13, son; and Ellie, age 7, daughter.

The same 1870 census reported that George [M.] Sterling, age 28, was living in Williamsport, Md. and was a farm laborer.\textsuperscript{20} Living with him was: Annie, age 21, his wife; Harry, age 1, his son; and Elizabeth, age 4 months, his daughter.

No record has been found of any canal boat mortgage by any Sterling. However, in 1876 the Lillie & Nannie with Capt. Sterling departed Cumberland with a load of coal on 5/18, 5/22, 6/2, 7/6, 7/26, 8/21 and 10/13/1876. The J. A. Ensminger with Capt. Sterling departed Cumberland with a load of coal on coal on 6/13, 7/14, 8/4, 9/6 and 12/6/1876. The two schedules interleave quite well, allowing for some short trips to Williamsport, vice Georgetown.

The next year the Lillie & Annie with Capt. Sterling departed Cumberland with a load of coal on 4/6, 4/30, 6/1, 8/28, 9/11, 9/21, 10/3, 10/14, 10/22, 11/6 and 11/18/1877. And the Robert B. Cropley with Capt. Sterling departed Cumberland on 4/13/1877. We suspect the Lillie & Nannie of 1876 was the Lillie & Annie of 1877 and subsequent years, a transcription error.

On Oct. 16, 1877 George M. Sterling applied for a pension based on his disability; his application #243363, for his wife application #775948 and for his minor child application #825985.

The next year the Abraham Kuhn with Capt. Sterling departed Cumberland with a load of coal on 4/23, 5/1, 5/13, 5/23, 6/4, 6/16, 6/26, 7/8, 7/19, 8/20, 8/30, 9/12, 9/29, 10/30 and 12/2/1878. Capt. Sterling was routinely making the round trip in ten to twelve days; which Sterling?

In March, 1878, we read: "Proceedings of Circuit Court. - We copy from the Mail of last Friday, the following report of Court proceedings:

"11th day - Friday, February 22.
"No. 148. Alex M. Flora vs. Henry Teidrick.
"This was an action brought by the plaintiff against defendant to recover the price of a canal boat, called the Edward Ringer, 2 mules, harness, and rig sold to the defendant in May, 1875, for $900.
"Alexander M. Flory testified to having sold the said boat, &c., to defendant in May, 1875, for $900, and that at the time of sale nothing was said, to his recollection, about time or terms of payment, and that he did not promise to line the boat in the Md. Coal Co.
"Henry Teidrick testified to having bought said boat, mules, &c., upon the condition that it was lined, or was to be lined, in the Md. Coal Co., and that it was to be paid for in trippages.
"Mr. Sterling, for defendant, testified to having bought the boat in company with Mr. Teidrick, and that it was to be lined in the Md. Coal Co., or was to get boating.
"It was proved by other witnesses that the boat did get loading through the boating season of 1875, and for every load it had to pay $10 to the company. There was also proof that lined boats had to pay the same that season in that company. In the Fall of 1875, Mr. Teidrick parted with the boat to a Mr. Renner, Mr. Teidrick being paid $175 of the purchase money.
"The case occupied part of Friday and all of Saturday and Monday. The jury retired at 3 o'clock P.M., Monday, and after being out 2 or 3 hours gave a verdict for $600 for the plaintiff.
George Schley and Buchanan Schley for plaintiff; Syester & Freaner for defendant. 22

In 1879 the C&O Canal installed a telephone line from Georgetown to Cumberland along the path of the canal. They installed 46 telephones at various locations: one of these was at "Sterling's Shanty." Samuel Sterling worked out of this shed doing maintenance along the canal. He may have been the first Sterling to use a telephone. 22

21 The Herald and Torch Light, Hagerstown, Maryland, newspaper, Wednesday, 3/6/1878, p. 2.
By 1880 Ellen Sterling, age 62, widowed, had moved back to Clear Spring District.\(^{23}\) Daniel, age 29, her son, and Joseph, age 26, her son, were living with her and their occupation was boatman. Her widowed daughter, Kate Small, 33 years old, and her grandson, Harry Small, were also living with her. She had taken in a boarder, Philip Feister, who was also a boatman. In the adjacent house lived the Andrew Snyder family of 7 people; Andrew was a boatman. Rudolph Herr, a Lock Keeper, lived only three houses away and several other residents were boatmen.

In Iowa, the 1880 census reported J. W. Sterling, age 43, a farmer, was still living in Lexington.\(^{24}\) Living with him were: Lizzie E., age 36, wife; William, age 18, son, working on the farm; Rhea, age 16, daughter; Gideon, age 13, son; Nellie, age 11, daughter; Wilhelmina, age 9, daughter; and Joseph, age 7, son. There does not seem to have been any interaction with the Maryland branch of the family, so we leave development of their history to others.

Remember that oldest daughter, Margaret Sterling, had already married John W. Snyder and the census reported John W. Snyder, age 47, a Laborer, living in the Downsville District.\(^{25}\) Living with him were: Margaret E., age 39, wife; Samuel C., age 22, son, a Laborer; Emma S., age 20, daughter; Margaret E., age 14, daughter; and Katie M., age 4, daughter. Sometime after 1880 they moved to Springfield, Ohio.

The 1880 census reported George M. Sterling, age 39; a Boatman, was living in Indian Springs.\(^{26}\) Living with him were: Annie, age 33, wife; Harry, age 11, son; Elizabeth, age 10, daughter; Lucy, age 7, daughter; Katie, age 6, daughter; Nannie, age 1; daughter; Meta, age 3, daughter; and Vernor [George], age 3/12, son. George had been out of work for 5 months during the previous year.

In 1880 the Steamer "Regulus" was registered with Capt. George M. Sterling, owned by William T. Hassett & Bro. The newspaper reported Regulus departing Cumberland with a load of coal on 5/29, 5/30, 6/5 and 6/6/1880. We suspect the newspaper double counted the departures, the Regulus only taking two trips with Capt. George M. Sterling. The Regulus made several more trips in 1880 with Capt. Hassett.

The 1880 census reported Samuel [B.] Sterling, age 36, a Carpenter, unemployed for 5 months, was living in Indian Springs.\(^{27}\) Living with him were: Mary E., age 31, wife; Kate, age 12, daughter; Ellie E., age 9, daughter; Samuel, age 6, son; Gracie, age 3, daughter; and Harry, age 1, son.

The 1880 census reported Henry Teedrick [Tedrick], age 50, a Boatman, living in Clear Spring, Md.\(^{28}\) Living with him were: Henrietta, age 36, wife; Mary C., age 16, daughter; and Eva, age 11, daughter. Daughter Nellie E. Tedrick was born 1/17/1880 but was not listed.

The 1880 census reported Matilda Sterling, age 46, widowed, was living in Williamsport, Md.\(^{29}\) Living with her was: Sallie [Sarah Ellen], age 18, daughter, unemployed. In the adjacent dwelling lived John F. Sterling, age 44, widowed, a Boss on Canal. Living with him were: [William] Edward, age 18, son, a Boatman, unemployed 4 months; Bertrand, age 15, son, a Boatman, unemployed 4 months; Charlotte, age 3, daughter; Owen A. McClain, age 38, unrelated, a Clerk in a Store; Alice McClain, age 34, wife; Andrew McClain, age 7, son; and Elizabeth Mendenhall, age 65, widowed, Mother-in-Law. Note that daughter Charlotte was three years old and Anna E. Sterling had died on 4/26/1877, suggesting she had died in child birth. Then John F. Sterling brought in the McClain family to mind the house, his infant daughter and his Mother-in-law while he was a Boss on the Canal and his two sons boated.

The same census reported Samuel Sterling, age 36; a carpenter was also living in Indian Spring. Living with him were: Mary E., age 31, his wife; Kate, age 12, their daughter; Ellen E., age 9, their daughter; Samuel, age 6, their son; Gracie, age 3, their daughter; and Harry, age 1, their son. Samuel had been out of work for 5 months during the previous year.

Following in family sequence, the same census, Henry Teedrick (Tedrick), age 50, a boatman was living in Clear Spring. Living with him were: Henrietta (Sterling), age 36, his wife; Mary C. age 16, their daughter; and Eva D. age 11, their daughter.

Still with the same census, Benjamin Sterling, age 30, who works on a canal boat, was living in Clear Spring. Living with him were: Fanny, age 29, his wife; Irene, age 5, their daughter, Ermy Ellis, age 14, a boarder, working as a seamstress, unemployed for 4 months; and Lula Ellis, age 12, a boarder, working as a servant, unemployed for 2 months during the previous year.

Henry A. Sterling died on Jan. 31, 1884; his wife subsequently received a Civil War widow's pension, #336523.

On September 24, 1884 Daniel Sterling of Washington County, Md. and Virginia [Augusta] Sanders of Berkeley County, W. Va. were wed at Martinsburg, W.Va. by R. C. Holland, Pastor of the St. John's Lutheran Church in Martinsburg, W. Va.

On Friday, September 11, 1885 - Last will and testament of Harry D. Small was admitted to probate, before the Orphans' Court.

"Three freshets within a period of six weeks in April and May of 1886 left the canal in a fearful state of disrepair and the company finances in a precarious position bordering on bankruptcy. On April 1, a flood swept down the entire length of the Potomac Valley, tearing a great hole in Dam No. 6, and generally wrecking havoc along the waterway. Four days later, another freshet widened the gap in the dam and added to the destruction of the canal proper. "On the Two-Mile Level below Four Locks the towpath was damaged greatly and there were several leaks. Forty-three men and eighteen carts under Mr. Masters were at work on these repairs. Damages to the Fourteen-Mile Level above Four Locks included heavy washes along the towpath at Little Pool and two breaks at that point, one 40 feet in length at its foot and one of smaller extent at its head. . . . A crew of 62 men and 22 carts under the superintendence of Mr. Sterling was handling the repairs from Little Pool to Sir Johns Run. “35

In July of 1886 a newspaper reported: "Presentation. - The bosses engaged in the rebuilding of dam N. 6, Chesapeake and Ohio canal, yesterday presented to Samuel D. Young, of Cumberland, who had general charge of the work, a handsome silver tea service. The urn bears this inscription: 'Presented to Samuel D. Young by bosses associated with him at dam No. 6, on the 30th day of July, 1886.' The names of the subscribers are also on the inscription as follows: J. W. Burgess, Lewis C. Hettenhouser, James E. Hughes, J. R. Cruzen, Samuel Sterling, John F. Sterling, W. H. Riley, Samuel A. Kelly, Jacob A. Wolf, C. H. Eckstein and T. C. Landerkin of this city.” 36

In March 1887 a newspaper reported: "Canal Matters. - The Sun in its report of the meeting of the C. & O. Canal Company at Washington yesterday states that there was a general discussion regarding the rights of the canal company to the Potomac flats, and other valuable rights along the line. . . . The president has appointed the bosses along the line, numbering about eleven men. . . . The appointment of bosses made by Col. Baughman is as follows: Cumberland division, Samuel Young, Peter Kelly, Randolph Sprigg, L. C. Hottenhouser, Samuel Sterling, James H. Anderson and Jas. Hughes.” 37

In August, 1887 the canal experienced a flood and the newspaper reported: "Repairing the Canal Breaks - A Cherry Run correspondent of the Baltimore Sun gives the following information concerning the recent damages to the canal and their repair. The correspondence is dated August 3. The flood here on the 25th ultimo, was unprecedented, and great damage was done to fencing and roads throughout this section. The sawmill below Green Spring Furnace was completely destroyed, and the road leading to the culvert was made impassable. The break at Ernstville was seventy five feet long and ten feet below the bottom of the canal. Work was commenced on Wednesday of last week, Mr. Samuel Sterling being in charge. Picks, shovels and carts had to be secured. Over fifty men with fifteen carts were put to work, and as much as fifteen hundred cart-loads of dirt were placed in the breach each day. Although the weather was excessively warm, the men drove along without a murmur, and by Tuesday morning the work was finished. . . .” 38

George M. Sterling was active in the Republican Party as evidenced by his election to the Republican County Convention, County Central Committee, for Election District 15. 39

Benjamin Sterling was selected to serve as a Juror to February Term of the Circuit Court for Washington County, Election District 2. 40

"Between May 30 and June 1, 1889, a titanic flood swept the Potomac, the crest of which was higher than any before recorded in the history of the valley. On the upper Potomac in Maryland, there were 50 lives lost and more than $2,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. . . . Between Four Locks and Hancock the towpath was washed to depths up to 4 feet for the distance of several miles."\(^{41}\)

After the flood of June 1889, "The canal company was unable to raise sufficient funds to repair the canal and found it necessary to declare bankruptcy. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad (as the major bondholder) offered to restore the canal, knowing that a railroad competitor was likely to buy the canal if there was a forced sale. The Maryland Circuit Court of Washington County at Hagerstown, Maryland, authorized the B. & O. Railroad to complete repairs and to operate the canal as a 'last ditch' effort."\(^{42}\) On March 3, 1890 Judge R. H. Alvey ordered the consolidation of two cases regarding the deposition of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company assets in its bankruptcy and appointed Robert Bridges, Richard D. Johnson and Joseph D. Baker as joint Receivers of all and singular the property, estate and franchises of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company. Their first task was to inventory all the real and personal property and effects of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company.

The First Report of Receivers was filed in Hagerstown, Md. on May 13, 1890. Exhibit A. Real Estate, Improved and Unimproved, listed the several lots owned by the Company. Of interest is: Lot No. 115, dwelling and stable owned by Geo. Sterling; rent unknown, Lot No. 116, dwelling occupied by Geo. Snyder; rent unknown and Lot No. 117, between stop lock and four locks, 2 houses, W. Ryan; rent unknown. The mentioned stop lock would be the one at mile post 119.71 near the lower end of Little Pool.\(^{43}\)

Exhibit B. Personal Property, listed the following in the Hancock Division, Samuel Sterling Reports: One house boat, 2 dozen dinner plates, 10 vegetable dishes, 1 large scow, 2 flour sifters, 3 old stools, 3 auger bowls, 1 large cook stove, 1 grindstone, 2 butcher knives, 3 heating stoves and pipes, 1 hanging lamp, 1 long handle shovel, 3 small hammers, 3 mowing scythes, 1 large kettle, 2 pr. gum boots, 1 old wash tub, 13 sheets, 18 pillow slips, 3 old jugs, 6 straw ticks, 2 small tin buckets, 1 small scow, 5 old chairs, 3 small portable slips, 1 doz. tablespoons, 8 table knives, 8 forks, 2 axes, 2 cant hooks, 5 picks, 4 short handle shovels, 1 bow lamp, 3 large sledges, 2 lanterns, 2 stand lamps, 3 hand drills, 3 do, 1 meat saw, 8 mattresses, 2 wash boilers, 2 large dish pans, 13 blankets, 1 large stone jar, 6 straw bolsters, 4 large iron pans, 1 old oil can, 2 paper buckets, 3 dinner pots, 2 coal hods, 3 hand irons, 1 tin bucket, 1 coffee pot, 1 coffee mill, 5 milk crocks, 6 pillows, 5 small pans, 6 comforts, 3 wooden buckets, 30 cups, 30 saucers, 9 pie plates, 1½ doz. teaspoons, 6 tin cups, 2 wash basins, 1 skillet, 3 dishes.

Samuel Sterling did not list the personal property in his charge segregated by whether it was on the house boat, large scow or small scow. Some of the scows did have quarters at the rear of the vessel; certainly suitable for cooking and dining, existence of living facilities on scows remains to be determined.

During the August Term of the Washington County Circuit Court, Justice Alvey on the bench, Case No. 45 was "Daniel Sterling vs. The Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Company; assumpsit; judgment on rule, for $361.09 and costs, J. M. Keedy for plaintiff; Keedy and Armstrong for defendant." 44

Ellen Sterling died March 28, 1890 and was buried in River View Cemetery, Williamsport, Md.

Tragedy struck the family as reported:

"Letter From Green Spring Furnace.
Green Spring Furnace, Md., December 20, 1890.
Editor Herald and Torch Light: - We are pained to report the untimely death of one of our young neighbors, a Mr. Harry Sterling, who was killed while attempting to board a moving freight train on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad near North Mountain. The deceased was an employee of the railroad but had been off duty on account of sickness for several weeks and had been home at the residence of his parents for some days. He was on his return to his own home in Martinsburg when the accident occurred. He was about 23 years of age and only lately married. His father, Mr. George Sterling, is in the employ of the Potomac Pulp Company at Dam No. 5." 45

Then it was reported in March, 1892:

"GREEN SPRING FURNACE NEWS
The canal is again full of water, and on Saturday morning last the first loaded boat of the season passed down requiring the services of the ice breaker through Big Pool, which was covered with ice." 46

In the same newspaper we read: "Mr. Chas. Weaver, of our neighborhood, and Miss Nellie Sterling, of Indian Spring, were married about two weeks hence. Our young maids and maidens, it seems, failed to captivate Charles, who by the way is quite a worthy and industrious young man." 47

Later that same year typhoid fever struck:

"Typhoid Fever at Clearspring
The community in the vicinity of Clearspring is becoming very much alarmed at the rapid progress being made by typhoid fever in that section. Within a radius of two miles of Clearspring there are eight cases of the fever reported raging at this time. . . . Four deaths have occurred in the last week. Mr. John Grosh, of near Ash, was buried in Clearspring on Sunday, Samuel [Thomas] Sterling, a young man, aged eighteen years, of Indian Spring, and the mother of David L. Houck, of Clearspring, were buried at Clearspring yesterday. They are reported as all dying from typhoid fever. The majority of the cases at present are located about two miles south of Clearspring, on the Williamsport road. Just why the disease should infect this particular section, cannot be accounted for by the residents who are growing alarmed at its rapid progress." 48

Henry and Henrietta (Sterling) Tedrick gave their daughter Eva D. Tedrick in marriage to Joseph E. Hazard of Highland Mills, N.Y. on October 5, 1892.

The Indian Spring Sunday school was reorganized by the election of new officers; secretary, Miss Grace Sterling.

George M. Sterling was selected to serve as a Juror to May term of the County Court, from Election District 15.

Samuel B. Sterling remained busy maintaining the canal as evidenced by the following:

"Much Activity on the Canal."

"Yesterday evening the Washington Star said: Activity in canal circles is unabated. The great discharging derricks and hoppers are being worked for all they are worth. It has been many seasons since the canal has been so much like the canal. Last season was not a bad one by any means, but this is to be a greater one. It was stated by one in a position to know that after paying all employees, repairing breaks and making improvements, the Chesapeake and Ohio canal coffers had $18,000 poured into them last year.

"Mr. Samuel B. Sterling, of Indian Spring, who is employed in Montgomery County as a canal superintendent, also says there is an unusual degree of activity seen now on the canal. A wonderful improvement has sprung up since last week."

Then we read:

"Downsville Will be Wet Again."

Geo. M. Sterling & Co. of Four Locks, purchased of C. L. Shank on Tuesday his store, saloon and fixtures situate on the Trout property in Downsville. Mr. Shank has been conducting a saloon on this stand for fifteen years but refused to take out a license on the first of May last.

"Messrs. Sterling and Co., will procure license June 1. Mr. Shank will erect a dwelling for himself during the present summer and give up his present residence to Mr. Sterling."

The next month we read: "George M. Sterling has assumed charge of the saloon which he recently purchased from C. L. Shank in Downsville." We suspect that he went into a partnership with a V. L. Woltz for operating the saloon, but the partnership did not survive even six months, as reported:

"NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION"

The partnership heretofore existing between George M. Sterling and V. L. Woltz, under the firm name of Sterling & Woltz, has been dissolved, George M. Sterling assuming the entire business. All bills against the firm will please be presented to him for payment.

A newspaper announced that: "Henry Tedrick will occupy a new store building at Two Locks on April 1, [1894]." During 1894 Dan Sterling began his duties as lockkeeper on the Canal at the Guard Lock at Dam No. 5; which duties he continued until 1919.

Meanwhile the Samuel Sterling family was celebrating as reported:

"MARRIED

HULL – STERLING – On May 13, at the residence of the bride’s aunt, Mrs. David Yeakle, Indian Spring district, by Rev. J. C. Koon, Mr. Wm. B. Hull, proprietor of the Indian Spring hotel, and Miss Grace M. Sterling, daughter of Samuel Sterling."

Then we read: "George M. Sterling and Henry Davis bagged 220 blackbirds on the farm of Andrew Snavely, Downsville." George Sterling must have put an emphasis on his children's education because we read that Susie Sterling had perfect attendance while Mazie Sterling and Nellie Sterling were absent only one day at their Downsville School, Primary Department during the fall 1894 term. Shortly thereafter: "Mr. George Sterling is on the sick list."

In 1894 John W. Snyder died and was buried in Emory Chapel Cemetery, Beattytown, Ohio. Also that year, Daniel Lee and Virginia Augusta Sterling became lockkeepers at Guard Lock, Dam No. 5.

The winter of 1895 was really brutal and yet George Sterling's children kept up their schooling:

"THE DOWNSVILLE TUNNEL

A Unique Reminder of the Blizzard - Scholars Braved the Storm

(Special to the Herald)

Downsville, Md., Feb. 13 - The blizzard of last week completely blocked the roads in this vicinity. A force of twenty men was placed on the Downsville pike for a distance of two miles. Two days were consumed in opening the thoroughfare. A short distance from the village on the Williamsport road the snow drifted to the height of fifteen feet. At that place the snow was excavated so as to form a tunnel, through which sleighs can pass with safety. . . . All the schools in the district were closed Friday and Monday except our village school. Twenty two pupils were present in each room on Friday notwithstanding the terrific snow storm.

The following pupils were regular in their attendance during the winter term in the assistant's room. Present every day: Mazie Sterling, . . , Susie Sterling, . . Scott Sterling."

Older sister, Meta Sterling, attended a quilting party given by Miss Myrtle Downs, of Downsville, later in that same year.

In May, 1897 a newspaper reported: "Daniel Sterling caught in a net in the Potomac river at Dam No. 5, C. & O. Canal, a carp weighing thirty-four pounds."\(^{63}\)

Later that month we find: "The following were named game wardens for this county: . . . Dan Sterling."\(^{64}\)

The 1900 census reported that George M. Sterling, age 60, was living in Hagerstown, on W. Antietam Street in a rented house and he was a saloon keeper.\(^{65}\) Living with him were: Annie R., age 52, his wife, who had 14 children, 11 of whom were still living; Mary K. Hays, age 26, their married daughter, who had 2 children, 1 of whom was still living; Meta F. Sterling, age 23, their daughter; Annie L. Rohrer, age 21, their daughter, married 3 years with no children; George V. Sterling, age 20, their son; Mazie V. Sterling, age 17, their daughter, working as a knitter in a stocking factory; Scott G. Sterling, age 15, their son, working as a nickel polisher; Susie T. Sterling, age 13, their daughter, also working as a knitter in a stocking factory; Nellie V. Sterling, age 11, their daughter; Orpha N. Sterling, age 10, their daughter; John C. Rohrer, age 25, their son-in-law, married 3 years, working as a bartender; and Annie P. Hays, age 7, their granddaughter.

The same census reported that Samuel Sterling, age 51[sic], was living in Indian Spring where he lived in a farm house that he owned on his farm and he was a Supervisor of Repairs on the C. & O. Canal.\(^{66}\) Living with him were: Mary, age 50, his wife, who had 8 children, 7 of whom were still living; Fannie Sterling, age 18, their daughter, who was a school teacher; Bessie Sterling, age 15, their daughter; and Jennette Sterling, age 9, their daughter. Our records, Appendix A, indicate that it was son, Samuel Sterling, who had already died, in Sept. 1892.

And that census reported that Daniel L. Sterling, age 49, was living in a rented house where he was a lock tender on the C. & O. Canal.\(^{67}\) Living with him were: Virginia A., age 47, his wife, who had 5 children, 4 of whom were still living; Bessie Sterling, age 15, their daughter; Mary Sterling, age 13, their daughter; Norman Sterling, age 9, their son; and Daniel Sterling, age 2, their son. Our records, Appendix A, indicate that it was their son, William Sterling, who had already died, in 1889 as an infant.

In 1901 George Sterling died; it was front page news:

"CARRIED BULLET TO THE GRAVE
"George M. Sterling, a Union Veteran, Wounded During the War,
"Dies at His Home in This City.

"George M. Sterling, a well-known resident, died at 2:30 o'clock this morning at his home, 232 Summit Ave., of heart trouble, after a serious illness covering a period of several weeks, aged 62 years. "Deceased was born in the "Neck," near Falling Waters, and was engaged in farming. He moved to Hagerstown about 7 years ago and was engaged in the saloon business first on Corgett's addition and later in Antietam St., and at the time of his death in Summit Ave., opposite the B. & O. depot. He was an ex-Union veteran having served through the Civil War as a member of the First Maryland Cavalry under Captain Russell. He was in different engagements and wounded once carrying a bullet in his body to the grave. He was a member of Reno Post G. A. R. and a republican.

"He is survived by his wife and the following children: Mrs. Bettie Sunner, Illinois; Mrs. Lucy Tyler, Ia.; Mrs. Katie Hays and Mrs. Annie Rohrer, this city; Mrs. Mazie Garlock, Bisell; Bernard, Chicago; Meta, Susie, Orphie, Nellie, Scott, at home; sisters, Mrs. Kate Gardner, Dam No. 5; Mrs. Mary Snyder, Springfield, O; brothers, Daniel, Dam No. 5; Samuel, Indian Spring; John, Iowa; Benjamin, Washington.

"Funeral Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, services at the house by Rev. Dr. S. W. Owen, interment in Rose Hill Cemetery. The G. A. R. will have charge of the funeral.

"He will be buried in the uniform of the cause he loved so well and under the flag of his country. A neighbor said, 'I never knew a squarer man than George Sterling - sterling in all that his name implies. He was liberal in his views, religion and social and he had no hard word for any man and generous hand and a kindly greeting for everyone, friend or stranger.'"

Annie had 14 children, 11 of which were still living in 1900. George had an Industrial Policy with Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which paid his widow $20.75 upon his death.

For the story we are about to relate, the scene at Guard Lock 5 and Dam No. 5 needs to be set. In the adjacent, undated photograph the towpath was visible on the left, the mule crossover bridge was visible on the far side of Guard Lock 5, the watch shanty was the small white structure in the middle, and the stairs lead across the by-pass flume and up the hill to the dirt road just below the lockhouse where the Dan Sterling family lived while tending the lock.

In the photo below, also undated, Dam No. 5 is shown on a calm day with visitors on the Maryland abutment and fishermen in a small boat right at the dam. Of note is the fall or drop should the fishermen be carried over the dam.

69 Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, letter dated 4/21/1903, found in Richard Ebersole Collection.
Now, in the below photograph, also undated, the overall layout of the exit from Guard Lock 5 is shown. The light canal boat would have gone under the mule cross-over bridge, the mule team would have proceeded up the towpath on the right, and the light boat would take the inland passage between the island and the towpath, which was available depending on the level of the river, the recent dredging of the passage, the draft of the canal boat, &c. Loaded boats, with deeper draft, would arrive via the Potomac River, outside the island, and then make an "S" turn to get lined up with the lock.

In the photograph below, also undated, a light canal boat had just cleared the mule cross-over bridge, the mule team had gone on up the towpath to the right, (notice the absence of trees which dates the photograph as taken during the operational period of the canal), and the boat captain was about to steer to the left, out into the Potomac River. On a calm day, it was not much of a problem. If the inland passage was dredged, the boat captain would steer straight ahead, reserving the river route for descending, loaded boats.
In May of 1973, Mary Mouse and Harry Newkirk told the following story to Ora Ann Ernst, a reporter for the Daily-Mail, a newspaper in Hagerstown, Md.:
The month of May marks the 70th anniversary of an unusual, nearly unbelievable event, shared by two elderly residents of Washington County.

"On May 1, 1903, Harry E. Newkirk, at the age of 18, was swept over Dam No. 5 in a canal boat while Mrs. Tom Mouse, then the 15-year-old Mary Sterling, watched the horrifying incident from the porch of her childhood home.

“It was shocking,” she said as she reminisced last week in her present home in Williamsport, “and I hope I never see anything like it again. My mother fainted when it happened.”

Newkirk of Big Spring, but now at Avalon Manor, also has vivid memories of his violent, near-fatal, ride over the falls.

"He and his 16-year-old brother Ralph had taken a horse from their home at Two Locks to plow a lot for the Sterling’s at Dam No. 5. As a “light” (empty) canal boat came west through the locks at the dam, a windstorm started to rise. Harry, giving his younger brother quick instructions to finish plowing the lot, ran down from behind the Sterling house that overlooked the dam and jumped on the boat to ride back to his father’s store at Two Locks. Mary Sterling Mouse recalls that Harry did so to help the “old man,” the captain of the boat, handle the ropes in the wind, but Harry can’t remember such altruistic motives.

“I do remember that I almost missed the boat when I jumped,” he says. Ten seconds later I wouldn’t have made it.

"Then things happened.

"At Dam No. 5, the canal boats had to go into slack water in the river to get to Two Locks. Because the cut at that time was somewhat overgrown, the route was father offshore, making an extra strain on the ropes and the mules pulling them. Harry’s recollection is that the new mule boy, too excited, whipped the mules who jumped and snapped the ropes.

"But Mary remembers her father’s story that the boy, fearing that the wind would drag the mules into the water, cut the lines himself. Neither story could be verified because the frightened lad ran off and never returned.

"In the meantime Ralph Newkirk and Dan Sterling, Mary’s father, had jumped into a skiff and grabbed the ropes.
“They tried to get to the bank to pull the canal boat in, but the wind was so great and it was out in the river too far, the line wouldn’t reach. They thought they could get it to the bank and snub it but they couldn’t,” Mrs. Mouse recalls.

“So the wind drove the helpless, unweighted boat over the dam.

“Harry remembers that it landed on its side, paused in that position, and then righted itself. He also recalls being knocked into the river and hanging onto the rudder blade. He can still see the ‘old woman,’ the wife of the boatman, Capt. Kime, as ‘she stuck her head out of a hole in the cabin and asked (Harry) if he saw anything of the girls.’

“The ‘girls’ were the two little daughters of Capt. And Mrs. Kime. They had been in the cabin with their mother. One was swept away with a table into the rough water; her body was found some days later. The other little girl had her leg broken when the cabin stove fell on it.

“Capt. Kime, who ‘had hold of the steer stick,’” trying to guide the boat, suffered many broken ribs and possible lung punctures.

“Dan Sterling and Ralph Newkirk had abandoned their skiff above the dam and rushed to get into another one below the falls. They pulled Harry out of the water and hauled him ashore, taking him to the Sterling home where Mrs. Sterling put dry clothes on him and put him to bed. She and the others were alarmed by bleeding from Harry’s mouth, but time proved that it was caused only by broken front teeth.

“Capt. Kime and his wife and remaining daughter were also put to bed in the Sterling house. Dr. Richardson from Williamsport came to minister to them and, in about a week, decided to move them to Ashton Station to board a train for their home in Cumberland.

“Will Frantz came from Clear Spring in his spring wagon to haul them to the station. Mrs. Mouse relates that Mrs. Kime sat on the front seat while her daughter was tied on a cot for the ride.

“Jimmy Ritchey, superintendent of that section of the canal, transported the injured boatman in his wagon, but Capt. Kime, with more internal punctures than first suspected, died at Ashton Station.

“The canal boat itself was not hurt. Company men came up and took it to Dam No. 4, where there was “big slack water,” and put it back into the canal.

“A barrel of oats that was in the middle cabin (where hay and other supplies were kept) never upset, Mr. Newkirk remembers.

“Two mules were in the third cabin, the “mule cabin.” They were thrown into the river. Mrs. Mouse recalls that the “blind one swam to Maryland and the other one went to West Virginia.”

“A canal boat usually had a complement of four mules—two on the towpath, working, and two in the cabin, resting. Harry remembers that his father, Tunis (Bud) Newkirk, owned a “dozen or more mules” which he rented or sold. The mule business was big because there were around 150 boats going up and down the canal at the beginning of this century, mostly hauling coal from Cumberland to Georgetown, and then returning “light” with some grocery supplies for stores along the river.

“Harry says that his father, who owned a grocery and feed store at Two Locks, received stables from wholesalers who shipped to Cushwa’s at Williamsport where they were loaded on the boats. Along with sugar, flour and salt there were also barrels of coal oil, buckwheat and molasses.

“Wholesalers that Harry remembers are Bloom’s, J. W. Myers and a firm called Wolfinger, Allen and Brown. He fondly talked of “Old man Tommy Allen as the nicest man in the country,” because he always had little treats for the children of his customers.
"Harry recollects, too, that he had to sleep in his father’s store at night. “Someone had to be there all night, because the boats came at any time. Andy Snyder was the lock tender and he slept in the shanty on the lock.”

"Harry also has remembrances of driving mules on the canal, especially on the long, eight-day trip from Cumberland to Georgetown, a towpath trek of 184 miles.

"Mary Mouse verifies his memories and adds some of her own. Vivid yet to her are the sunsets of the dam as seen from the porch of her home and dramatis is her mind’s picture of the breakup of ice on the river, with huge pieces going over the falls. She is still amazed by the remembered phenomenon of large trees going over the dam, being caught in the powerful undertow that threw them back to the falls again and again for as long as four days, and left them denuded of all limbs and branches.

"But the most outstanding recollection for both is that of May 1, 1903, when Harry unintentionally rode over the dam and Mary, horrified watched from her porch."70

Later that month a newspaper reported: "The body of an eight-year old child, supposed to be that of the daughter of Capt. J. Kime, who was drowned in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, was recovered at Falling Waters."71

In July 1904, a newspaper reported: "STERLING - MAGAHA

"Harry F. Sterling and Minnie E. Magaha, both of this county, were married yesterday at the Evangelical Reformed parsonage, this city, by Rev. Dr. E. R. Eschbach."72

The next year, the same newspaper noted under "PROPERTY DEEDED.

One of the highlights of a day at Four Locks, for the children, was the arrival of the horse-drawn library bookmobile, seen in the photograph above between the telephone poles and the low stone wall.

In the time frame 1903 - 1909, from a 2009 magazine article, we learn that: "Fishing parties from the Blue Mountain House [at Pen Mar, 15 miles east of Hagerstown on the Western Maryland Railroad mainline] can take the fast mail train after an early breakfast and in less than two hours will be getting 'bites' from the Big Pool (lake), the Potomac near Williamsport, or Dam #5 on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal between the two."

Dan Sterling was the lockkeeper at Guard Lock 5, Dam # 5, during that time.

In June, 1908, a newspaper had the following obituary: "JNO. F. STERLING DEAD. - A Well Known Canal Official Dies in Washington. - Williamsport, Md., June 9, - John F. Sterling, a former resident of this place and at one time an official of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, died at his home in Washington, of apoplexy, aged 70 years. Mr. Sterling was supervisor of the middle division of the canal for a number of years previous to the flood of 1889. He was twice married, and is survived by his second wife, a daughter (Mrs. Louis A. Weisberg, of Pittsburg) and two sons (B. A. Sterling, of Ottumwa, Ia., and W. E. Sterling, of Pennsylvania) and one brother (Richard N. Sterling, of Mount Sterling, Ky.). His body was brought here yesterday and buried in Riverview cemetery."

On Sep. 27, 1908, Mazie V. [Sterling] Garlock was baptized in the Lutheran Church, Gettysburg, Pa.

By the time of the 1910 census, Margaret E. (Sterling) Snyder, age 70, widowed, was living with her son-in-law William H. Melvin, age 43, who was working as a Blacksmith. Also living with William Melvin were: Myrtle C. (Snyder), age 33, his wife; John W., age 15, their son; Samuel E., age 13, their son; Harry A., age 11 their son; and Marjorie L., age 2, their daughter. William and Myrtle had been married 17 years; she had 4 children, all of whom were then still living. Son Samuel was working as a News Boy on the street. John and Nellie (Snyder) Dellinger, with their 2 daughters and a boarder, were living in Springfield City.77

The 1910 census reported Samuel Sterling, age 67, was still a Foreman on the C. & O. Canal, living in Election District 18.78 Living with him was: Mary E., age 61, his wife; Bessie W., age 25, their daughter, who was teaching school; and Jennette J., age 19, their daughter.

The same census reported Daniel L. Sterling, age 59, was a Lock Tender on the C & O Canal, living in Election District No. 4.79 Living with him were: Jennie A., age 56, his wife, who had 5 children 4 of whom were then still living; Mary J., age 22, their youngest daughter; Norman B., age 18, their son, a laborer on the Canal; Daniel B., age 11, their son, and Hilda A. Hull, age 3, their granddaughter. In the adjacent photograph, taken about 1910, on the left was Bessie Ellen Sterling Hull, the oldest daughter; then Virginia "Jennie" A. Sterling with the granddaughter Hilda A. Hull at her feet; and Daniel Lee Sterling with their youngest son, Daniel B. Sterling at his feet. There were feet of two other individuals at the top of the photograph, but their identity remains unknown; the feet on the right could have belonged to Norman B. Sterling, age 18. In the C&O Canal NHP photograph below we see the same lockhouse, same steps, from the towpath.

On or about August 25, 1910, Aloysius Flynn, lock tender at Four Locks, was killed when run over by a Western Maryland freight train near Clear Spring station.80

In early 1914 Catherine Warrone Sterling Yeakle had a tooth pulled; it abscessed and she died three weeks later on Feb. 20, 1914.

Dan took over as Superintendent on the Canal from Dam No. 6 to Cumberland. Apparently they then lived with their daughter Bessie Wooden and her husband William Wooden at 831 West Franklin Street in Hagerstown, Md. William Wooden worked as a brakeman on the Western Maryland Railroad.

Later that same year Mary Elizabeth Sterling died; the newspaper reported:

"DEATHS

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Sterling, wife of Samuel B. Sterling, died on Thursday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock at her home, 604 West Church Street, of general disability, after an illness of five weeks, aged 70 years, 10 months and 1 day. She was a member of St. John's Episcopal Church. Mrs. Sterling is survived by her husband; daughters, Mrs. Charles Weaver and Mrs. M. A. Dorsey, both of this city; Mrs. Fred Martin, Indian Spring and Miss Bess, at home; son Harry F. Sterling, Point of Rocks and brother, Thomas Ford, Grand Rapids, Mich. Funeral Saturday; service at the home at 2 p.m. by Rev. S. Hilton Orrick; interment in St. Paul's Cemetery along the Western Pike." 88

An Ohio newspaper reported the death of Margaret E. (Sterling) Snyder:

"SNYDER - Mrs. Margaret E. Snyder, 82, died of pneumonia Saturday evening, October 1, 1921 at 8:45 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Melvin of Bealtytown. Funeral services will be held in Emery Chapel in Bealtytown at a time to be announced later. Burial will be in Emery Chapel cemetery." 89

That was the same burial place as for her husband, John W. Snyder who died in 1894.

In 1922 the Daniel L. Sterling family were living in Hagerstown, Md. Daniel L. was retired and living at 831 W. Franklin St., with his wife, Jennie A., and daughter, Bessie W., who was a clerk at C. H. Eyerly Co. 90 Daniel B. Sterling was a machinist living at 11 Garmong Ave.

Chapter 3 Between Floods - 1924 to 1936

By 1923 Clifford S. and Mazie [Sterling] Garlock were living on Windsor Mill Road, Baltimore and he was a foreman. 91 Their son, Max S. Garlock lived at 128 Wilkins St. and worked in a lab. Their son, Daniel Garlock also lived at 128 Wilkins St. and was a machinist.

In August 1923, Harry F. Sterling was re-elected as a Clerk of Election, District No. 1 Buckeystown, Precinct 2. 92 He had previously been elected to that position in 1916. 93

"On March 29, 1924, the first major flood in 35 years swept down the Potomac Valley and wrecked the canal. Melting snow and heavy rains caused the Potomac and its tributaries, especially the Shenandoah, to rise and overflow their banks. . . . The flood of 1924 provided the opportunity for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to relieve itself of the expense of operating the canal." 94

Norman B. Sterling registered as a new voter, District 2, Precinct 2, Republican, in Williamsport, Md. in October 1924. 95

The Norman B. Sterling family lived on Roessner Ave, Halfway, Md. in a frame house with a front porch. The family is shown in the adjacent photograph, taken circa 1928, based on the youngest daughter, Betty Zane, being about 3 years old and Pearl A. Sterling being still alive. The family identification is, across the porch from left to right: Anna Marie (11 years); Ralph (5); Jane Eleanor (14); and Alice Marie (9); then in front of the porch, also from left to right: Mary Virginia (15); Nora Catherine (7); Norman B. Sterling; Betty Zane (3); Pearl E. Sterling; Norman James (7); and Wilbur Lee (16 years old).

On July 9, 1925 Samuel B. Sterling applied for a pension under the provisions of the act of Congress approved May 1, 1920. At the time of application he was 82 years old, had been born on September 13th, 1842, enlisted August 20th, 1862 in Company H, 6th Regiment, Maryland Infantry, and was discharged on July 2nd, 1865. On August 20th, 1862 he was 5 ft 8 inches in height, dark complexion, blue eyes, light colored hair and he had been a farmer. He had been employed on the C. & O. Canal for 35 years and subsequently incapacitated. Since Oct. 1924 he had required the regular personal aid and attendance of another person; he was totally disabled in every respect. He was living at 237 Elizabeth Street, Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. Chas Weaver and Dersua Weaver, of the same address, were his two witnesses. As far as we know the pension was granted.

Unfortunately, Samuel B. Sterling died March 30, 1926; the newspaper obituary reported:

"Samuel D. Sterling died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Weaver, 237 Elizabeth Street, last night from pneumonia, aged 84 years. He was a member of St. John's Episcopal Church and of Reno Post, Grand Army of the Republic. He was born and reared in the Downsville District and was the son of Samuel and Ellen Williams Sterling.

"He is survived by the following children: Mrs. Nellie Weaver, this city; Mrs. Frederick Martin, Clearspring; Mrs. Milton Dorsey and Miss Bessie Sterling, Hagerstown, and Harry Sterling, Washington Junction. A brother Daniel Sterling also survives.

"Funeral Friday Afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, services at the house, 237 Elizabeth Street, Rev. Conrad Clever officiating. Interment at St. Paul's along Western Pike."

In 1926 Clifford S. and Mazie [Sterling] Garlock were living at 40 S. Garrison Lane, Baltimore and he was a foreman. Their son, Daniel and Clara M. Garlock lived at 6 S. Garrison St. and he was a boilermaker.

Garlock lived at 1821 Arunah Ave. and he worked as a tender repairman. Their son, Daniel and Clara Garlock lived at 6 S. Franklintown Rd. and was a boilermaker. Daughter Viola S. Garlock was a student and lived with her parents.

Pearl Elizabeth Sterling died on Nov. 21, 1929 as reported in the newspaper:

The next year was a census year and from that census report we see that Norman B. Sterling was a widower with nine (9) children living on Roessuer Ave, Halfway, Md. All the children were still single. He did own the home, valued at $4,500, and he had a radio set. He was a butcher and his oldest son, Wilbur, was a Clerk, probably at the same Grocery Store.

He owned and operated the N. B. Sterling Meats - Groceries store shown in the above photograph. He ran the store with the help of his daughter and two of his sons.

Chapter 4 - After 1936 Flood - Decline and Resurrection of C. & O. Canal Period

"A sudden thaw in the wintery temperatures throughout the eastern United States from Maryland to the Canadian border in mid-March 1936 led to the heaviest flood in recorded history of the Potomac Valley. While the loss of life was comparatively slight, numerous buildings, roads and bridges were destroyed. The Potomac not only flooded its upper reaches to epic proportions, but for the first time in living memory, it went out of its banks along the southern border and caused extensive damage almost down to the Atlantic. . . . In the vicinity of Four Locks, the river rose 10 feet above its 1889 crest. . . . At Lock 47 the lockhouse, which had withstood the 1889 freshet, was destroyed."\textsuperscript{114}

By October 1936, Norman B. Sterling had moved to Hagerstown where he registered as a new voter, District No. 17, Precinct 2, Republican, residence at 338 S. Potomac St.\textsuperscript{115}

Town of Four Locks Springs from Canal Construction

By Frank Woodring

In the spring of 1839, the section of the C & O Canal in Washington County known as Four Locks opened to boat traffic. Located at Mile 109 along the 184.5 mile navigational route from Georgetown to the western Terminus at Cumberland, the one-mile section of canal through Prather's Neck allowed canallers to avoid the four-mile path that the Potomac River follows around the Neck.

In order to allow for the shortcut, the engineers designed a series of four locks (47, 48, 49 and 50) to accommodate a 32-foot rise in elevation. It was here along the locks that a community known as Four Locks slowly ebbed forth from the waters of the canal.

Just as the C & O Canal thrived for nearly 100 years, so did the town of Four Locks. In 1873 a Williamsport newspaper noted that the canal "employs 400 boats constantly during the boating season. These boats require 2,000 head of mules, give employment to 2,000 persons directly and 2,000 indirectly. The mules consume at least 25,000 barrels of corn, 3,840 bushels of oats, and 500 tons of hay. This provender, which is mainly purchased along the line of the canal, costs in the aggregate $60,000." In 1875 canal boats hauled 904,898 tons of coal alone.

Over the years of its existence, canal operations were constantly hindered by flooding, and with the Flood of 1924 the canal finally shut down. Four Locks had ridden the tide of prosperity for more than three quarters of a century, but with the C & O Canal now a page from the past, the history of Four Locks as a community was likewise beginning to fade.

Today, the small white shed at Lock 50 is the lone remaining watch shanty left along the entire length of the C & O Canal. It was here that Four Locks resident George Bowers housed his chickens. His father Harry Bowers at one time repaired canal boats at the drydock at Lock 47.

It was at the mule barn across from Lock 50 where mules were stabled during the winters and feed and harness were kept. It was here that 81-year-old Leroy Mellott remembers keeping the family cow. From here he led the cow across the canal to the nearby Potomac for water.

It was on the berm along the canal at Four Locks where Mellott would pull his little red express wagon piled high with laundry from his grandparent's cabin upstream to his home in what is known as the Flory House across from Lock 49. It was in the canal between locks 49 and 50 where he remembers upsetting his wagon and its valuable cargo.

It was in the large stone house overlooking Four Locks where 80-year-old Hazel Starliper once worked when Thomas and Kate Hassett were entertaining guests. Hassett at one time served as a purchasing agent for the C & O Canal and served two terms as a Washington County Commissioner.

Maryland Cracker Barrel, newsmagazine, Boonsboro, MD, April/May 2003, pp. 4 - 24. The article text was transcribed in its entirety because many readers would not have access to the newsmagazine back issues.
Later, Hazel and her husband bought the home with the date 1868 on the keystone on the south side of the house.

It was at Four Locks School, known earlier as Cedar Grove, where 73-year-old Charles Mellott attended school after getting up early in the morning to milk cows. Gone are the rail fences once covered with winter snows that Mellott walked over en route to the school.

It was in Lockhouse 49 where 72-year-old Fonrose Taylor, jr., grew up and lived most of his life until he moved to Big Spring in 1971. It was Taylor's grandfather Samuel Taylor who served as Four Locks' last lockkeeper.

Today, visitors can still see the structures mentioned, but gone are the numerous homes that once comprised the community of Four Locks. Gone is the drydock at Lock 47, the store that sat over the by-pass flume on the berm side of Lock 48, the large combination feed and supply store and warehouse over the flume at Lock 49, and the feed store/warehouse over the flume at Lock 50.

Remaining, however, are the memories of some of the individuals who called Four Locks home. Their stories follow.

Mellott Brothers Recall Four Locks 'As A Good Place To Grow Up'

Perhaps Charles Mellott best characterized growing up in the Four Locks area when he reflected, 'It was a good time back then - we didn't have much money to do anything with, but you still had good times!'

"Mellott's roots in Four Locks run extremely deep. His mother Martha Moser Mellott was born in a log house that predated the Civil War west of Lock 50 in 1901, and his brother Philbert Leroy Mellott was born in a log cabin near his mother's birthplace. Charles himself was born in what is known as the Flory House, one of the few remaining houses in Four Locks.

The daughter of Louis (Dickie) and Sarah Moser, Martha recall her father working on the Western Maryland Railway before switching to the C & O Canal where he was captain of Boat No. 88. "He hauled coal from Cumberland to Georgetown. He kept two mules in the boat and two on the path. Sometimes he used all four."

She laughed as she recalled on one occasion that her family took 'a yellow cat to Georgetown' where he was left. Some time later the cat returned home, but this time it was a 'black' cat due to the coal dust it had collected while following the railroad home.

Before she passed away several years ago, Mrs. Mellott recalled that she "walked one mile to Four Locks School (also known as Cedar Grove School) for seven years from the age of 6 to 13."

Leroy, 81, recalls Four Locks "as a good place to grow up. It's a wonder a lot of children didn't drown in that canal. I always think of that! I can remember the canal; I remember the water coming through the flume."
When Leroy was about eight years old, the family moved into the Flory House situated across from Lock 49 and Lockhouse 49, originally the only designated lockhouse at Four Locks. The two-story brick house is still standing today.

The date of "August 10, 1883" is engraved in stone on the north side of the Flory House. Reportedly, Alexander Flory was a major in the 1st Potomac Home Brigade, Maryland Cavalry. Following the Civil War, Flory operated a store and post office in Four Locks either in the house or adjacent to it.

When Mellott started school at Four Locks, he followed the same path his mother took when she walked the mile to the one-room brick school, which is still there today. When his family moved into the Flory House in 1929, Leroy's walk was a bit shorter, but about 1931 the Mellotts moved to a farm owned by Tommy Hassett northwest of Big Spring. Now the walk was 2.2 miles if you took the road but a bit shorter when crossing fields.

"I used to walk over the snow, over the fence posts. We never had no delays like they got now. I had to milk a couple of cows when I got home. I got tired. I didn’t have time to do the lessons sometimes. It was too much work for me - feeding the chickens and hogs."

Leroy's teacher for his eight years at Four Locks School was "Donald Haugh for all but about six months. I used to come down the road sometimes and catch a ride with him." Mellott remembers "the school had a pot-bellied stove in it, and the pipe run out the back end. We carried water from down at the Thomas Hassett house (large stone house overlooking Four Locks). With a stick two of us would go down. One time I stumped my toe and spilled the water and had to go back and get another bucket."

"Coal heated the stove. Some of us would go out and get a bucket and bring it in - a little shed there - got coal from Angle's (Store and Elevator in Big Spring)."

"Wasn't over 18 or 20 student at one time - wasn't any more than that; there was only three of 'em in our eighth grade class: me and Robert Haines and Hazel Hart."

"We used to play soccer ball - had one fellow, Kenneth Suffecool. Boy, he could run fast. I liked to be on his side."

Living on the Hassett farm involved plenty of work for Leroy, who stated, "I was plowing at 10 or 12 years old - two head of horses. Dad had three head, and I had two head. I had an Oliver plow; it wasn't quite as big (as his father's plow). Sometimes I'd hit a rock and the plow would jump out - Dad, he was giving the dickens about it falling out, and I'd get back and get in the furrow again."

"I've cut many a shock of corn, husk it too - boy, oh boy - had to saw wood with a crosscut saw. I hated that thing, though; it was tiresome."

While living on the Hassett farm, Leroy recalls some of the deep snows that shut them off from the rest of the world. On one occasion he remembers, "It took us a week and a half to shovel out; Dad would shovel snow to me, and I'd shovel it over the top (of the drifts)."
"I remember when they used to pull ice off the Potomac with a horse. They'd take the chunks in carts to the caves. There were two caves up at the Hassett place - had straw in there. It would keep for a long time."

One of the stories Mellott's father shared with him involved a man skating down the Potomac and coming upon an opening in the ice. 'Dad said he just lifted up and jumped over top that hole - about eight feet. He had his hands on his back and leaped over that and went over on the other side.'

To get extra money, Leroy said, "I used to catch squab - pigeons - and take 'em out to Four Locks, and Harry Snook from Hagerstown - used to come from Hagerstown on Sunday - come up to see Wes Mann. I'd go up there and take maybe three or four pigeons - get a quarter apiece for them. I'll never forget that!"

In Mellott's lifetime "there was only one store at Four Locks - the Sam Fernsner Store. They had a pot-bellied stove in there. They (men) sat on old benches and talked. I'll never forget that. I remember seeing that store - sat next to the lock. They used to play checkers and gamble some. I didn't know nothing about gambling."

"I'll never forget one time they had cheese in the round block. Mr. Snyder lived at Big Spring and used to come up and help Sam Fernsner to run the store. I bought a pound of cheese to take over to the house, and I told Dad, "He cut a piece off of my cheese and ate it. I seen him do it." Dad went and told him about it."

"They had candy in jars. I'll never forget that. They had sugar - it didn't come packaged. They dipped it out and put it in brown pokes - came in kegs. Nails was in kegs, too. You'd buy so many, and they weigh 'em."

"The store had molasses by the barrel. It had an old crank on it, and in the wintertime, it was pretty hard winding that."

"My uncle Harry Hull lived back on a farm way up past where I was born. He used to sell milk - used to bring it out on a cart and horse - had two 10-gallon cans to come in and pick it up in an International truck."

Mellott laughed as he related the story of how "Harry Bowers used to come out and call the chickens in the morning. We was living way back in the Neck (Prather's). He'd go out and call, 'peep, peep, peep!' My uncle said one time, 'I think he called a couple of our chickens.' I'll never forget that!"

The Big Pool resident also remembers "driving about 35 head of cattle over through Williamsport clear down below Downsville. I might have been nine at the time - about five or six of us. Cows after you get them started, they go right behind each other. You can drive them any place."

At 81 Mellott still raises beef cattle as does his brother Charles. Leroy remembers that when his family lived in the Flory house "there was a little barn there (across from Lock 50). We had a cow - called her Daise - and I was only eight years old. I used to take her for water - take her clear down to the river and bring her back up - used to stop down there by the house, and Mother would milk her. Old Guernsey cow she was!"

As far as recreation, "We went to the Blair's Valley Picnic. We used to go to Conomac Park at Williamsport - any place you could get now and then. You didn't get many times."

Mellott lovingly looked at his wife Crystal (Bartles) and commented, "I seen her up there (Blair's Valley). She stumbled for me. Me and Ralph Gehr and three or four of us fellows was talking there, and she came up. I think she stumbled on purpose. She got up all right and laughed. That's where we started talking."

Many of Charles Mellott's most vivid memories of growing up in the Four Locks area pivoted around the school and the Hassett farm near Big Spring.

Charles, 73, noted, "We had to get up and milk cows in the morning before we went to school. Then you had to walk from there clear to school, and you had to be there at 9 o'clock. We'd go to school no matter if it was raining or snowing or what it was. The snow used to get so deep back in them back roads - had a lot of fence rail up then. You'd walk over top of the rail fence and didn't know you were walking over top of it because the snow had blowed in and drifted, you know. It took us pretty close to an hour. We had to leave at 8 o'clock in the morning to get there at 9. I went there for seven years.

"Wint Murray used to run the store at Big Spring, and we would cross the fields, and he had a big, old police dog, and that police dog would come out there, and boy he would charge you. We was scared to death of that dog. We'd always try to get past him without him knowing we was there. He'd come out and bark - you'd think he was going to tear you up."

On another adventure that occurred en route to school, Charles said, "I had trouble with hogs one time back on the farm there. I left that morning to go to school, and Harry Newkirk down below us there he had some hogs, and we had hogs, so I got down to the barn that morning, and I got between these hogs that were fighting, and I climbed the fence up against the barn, and I hung there. Later on my Dad came down, and he found me - asked me, 'What are you doing?' I was scared to death. I didn't get to school that day. I'll never forget that!

"Had Mr. Donald Haugh, and then at last Mr. Creek - Peter Creek. We had a substitute - Mrs. Ada Smith. She was a strict teacher. I mean you couldn't drop a pin on the floor that she didn't hear it. We'd go to school in the morning, and we'd see her there, and we'd say, 'Oh boy, it's going to be a good day.'"

"She'd say, 'Now you boys go out there and cut me a stick behind the school, and I want a big one. If you come back here with a little one, you're going to get it.' She would! We'd go out and cut her a big, long stick, 'That's fine,' she'd say.

"And she'd lay it right across the desk. Boy if you made a little move or dropped something, she's say, 'If you do it one more time, you're going to get it.' She was strict, she was, but she was a nice woman. You could learn off of her."
"What I liked about it, you could learn going to school like that - you had eight grades in there, see. If you paid any attention to any thing, you could take and hear the other classes on up higher. You could learn from one grade to the other, and when you got to the other grades, you knowed pretty much what you was doing.

"We used to go out in the yard at dinner time and eat along the road - sit along the rocks and eat, you know. It was really nice - enjoyable. The Hart boys and the Tosten boys would go down to their house and eat - weren't too far away.

"We played soccer ball and went out and would shoot marbles. I used to take marbles to school, and my (future) brother-in-law (Boots Hart), he was good. He was left-handed. He was a good marble shooter; he'd take all your marbles. Take a crayon and go out there and mark the ground, you know!

"We walked to school many a time - we'd be soaking wet when we got there. Very seldom got sick. We always had to take and bundle up good, you know, and had our little artics we'd put over our shoes.

"It didn't get too hot in there (school) because the heat went up in the air. That old school was high on the inside, you know, but we survived all right!

"When we used to go to school, Mon sometimes wouldn't have lunch for all of us, so we'd stop there at the Big Spring store, and I'd go in and get smoked bologna - of course, for 10 or 15 cents worth you had a lot of bologna, and we'd get that and fix our sandwiches and out on the road we'd go."

We'd take some potato chips and some pickles or something like that. We'd take some cake or cookies sometimes - carried lunches in pokes.

"I'll never forget one time my brother-in-law and I sat together (in double desks). This girl Vera McCallister sat right across the aisle. I got to talking to her now and then, and Mr. Creek said, 'If you don't quit talking, you're going to sit with her.' I put my head down, and then I went back to work, and after a bit I started talking to her again.

"Boy, I seen him jump up, and his face turned red. I though uh oh, here he comes. He come down, and the desks was bolted to the floor, and he came around the corner by the stove, and he grabbed me by the shoulder, and when he did, I reached over and grabbed the other side of the desk, and he jerked and he jerked and after a bit he jerked the screws out of the floor, upset the desk, and Chip he jumped out in the hallway.

"He got me loose from that desk, and he throwed me up in the air, and he grabbed me and put me in the seat where the girl was over there. I laughed about that when it was all over, but boy I seen he was coming. That was something. I'll never forget that!

"Mr. Creek smoked - I'll never forget it - had outside toilets, you know, so he went down there, and he got in this toilet. Us boys got a hold of that toilet, rocked her, and upset her with him in there. We run, but he didn't know who done it!"
Just as there was no electricity at Four Locks School, there was no electricity at the Mellott home on the Hassett farm. As Charles remembers, "No electricity in the house - coal oil lamps and wood stoves is all we had - go to bed at night, and you'd freeze to death in bed. Back then the mattresses we took down to the straw stack and had good clean straw when they thrashed - put the mattress full, and Mom would sew 'em tight. It was nice. You would dig down in that there mattress, especially after you rolled around in it a couple of days - it would be nice to lay in.

"We had an old battery radio. Sometimes on Saturday night we'd stay up and listen to Nashville, Tennessee - the Grand Ole Opray. You'd have to get up close to it though because sometimes the batteries would get weak. It wouldn't come in too good."

When the brothers milked in the evenings in the winter "we had a nail in the log, and we'd take the lantern and hang it up on the log. The last thing we had to do is go - me and Leroy would saw wood - had a sawbuck there, and we'd get our wood, ant that was every evening we had to saw wood - take a crosscut saw and saw it. Them was rough days, but they was good days. I enjoyed 'em.

"I plowed with horses when I wasn't big enough to even look over the plow handles - had to walk with the plow handles up above my head. Instead of walking in the furrow, I had to get up the side and walk on the ground.

"We'd go night hunting with a flashlight and hunt polecats and possums. We had a dog that like to hunt that kind of stuff. Old Mr. Burnett in Clear Spring used to buy 'em. He'd get about $2 or $3 for a polecat, but it was a job getting them.

"Leroy would catch 'em alive. Somebody had to hold the dog, and Leroy would hold the flashlight in his (polecat's) eyes and reach back and get his tail. If you get the tail off the ground, they won't do nothin' to you. They can't spray you. I had to hold the sack then drop 'em in the sack. He was alright once he was in the sack.

"Then we'd take 'em to our house - had an old chicken house there, and we'd take and put the polecats in there. They'd fight, you know. You get a bunch of 'em in there - keep 'em in there for a few days and kill 'em you know and take 'em in to him. Sometimes he'd come and get them.

"We'd catch mice and throw 'em in there, and they'd get these mice and eat 'em, you know. They got tame though; you could put your hand on 'em. They wouldn't bother you. They'd come right to the door the same as a cat would."

Mellott remembers when "you had to carry all the water from the springhouse down over the hill. At Easter time I would take and go hide eggs. Of course, they always sold the eggs, you know. Chickens would lay all around through the barn, and I'd go and take a couple out of this nest and a couple out of that nest.

"I had a big sack with straw in to keep them from freezing, and I'd keep them for Easter morning. On Easter morning I'd take and bring these eggs in. Dad said, 'I knew you was stealing eggs.' I'd give 'em to Mom, and she would take and fry our eggs for us then. Back then you had to sell that kind of stuff to make any money. Mostly Dad would take 'em in to Clear Spring to old Albert Houck - used to have a store in Clear Spring - and he bought all of his eggs."

Years later the Mellott family moved to what is known as the John C. Hassett House west of the mule barn where Daise was kept. It was while living here that Charles noted, "I used to put hay up there, and we kept horses in the old barn."

The John C. Hassett House can still be seen today in Four Locks. The 1900 Census listed Hassett as a mail carrier, and the 1910 Census referred to him as a storekeeper on the canal along with his brother William. The store, which sat over the flume at Lock 50, was referred to as the W. T. Hassett and Bro. Store according to the 1887 Washington County Atlas.

Following the close of the C & O Canal in 1924, the community that had sprung up due to the emergence of the canal slowly began to fade away into time. Both Leroy and Charles remember the Flood of 1936 that took away various buildings in Four Locks. As Charles recalls, "Everything was covered down at Four Locks!"

Just as the flood waters of '36 helped to vanquish the once-vibrant town, time likewise has pretty much erased all but memories of Four Locks' history that dates back to a plan submitted by Assistant Engineer Alfred Cruger for the construction of the canal above Dam #5 in 1833.

Big Spring Resident Vividly Recall Four Locks Last Lockkeeper

One of the few remaining structures in the once bustling community of Four Locks is Lockhouse 49, which was completed in March of 1839 at a cost of $1,447.50.

For 72-year-old Fonrose Taylor, Jr., the lockhouse holds a lifetime of memories for it was here that the Big Spring resident was born in 1930, six years after the C & O Canal ceased operations.

The two-story brick house was also the birthplace of Taylor's father, Fonrose Taylor, Sr., and the home of Taylor's grandparents, Sam and Ida Taylor. When Taylor and his daughter moved out of the lockhouse in 1971, it marked the end of four generations of Taylors who lived in the home.

Taylor's grandfather served as lockkeeper at Four Locks from 1889 until 1924. As Fonrose recalled his grandfather, he stated, "We lived there with them (grandparents). He started to work for the canal when the canal opened up. He was the last locktender that lived there, and his one son William lived in a small house near the lockhouse." William was the owner of boat #41.

Taylor remembers his grandfather as "short. He didn't weigh too much. He was a lot of fun - had a little mustache. He was a small man, but he was feisty. My grandfather Hart said he would do anything for anybody, but he would never take much off of anyone, you know.

"He said he remembers one time he went to a dance up there at Indian Springs, and he said the dance had been going on for quite awhile. Of course, some of them was getting too much to drink, you know, and he said Sammy Taylor walked in, and one of the bigger guys went up and said something to him that he didn't like.
"He said he can still see him - said he just made a leap - said he had to jump to hit him, and he hit that guy and down he went. He said after that no one ever fooled with him.

"We had a nice sized garden. I remember one year my grandfather and grandmother had a beautiful garden, and my cousin and I, we got out there in the garden. I guess we were about 8 or 9. We went out, and we were going to weed the garden.

"We weeded the garden. We pulled all the onions up, and all the radishes and beets. We pulled everything up and piled 'em up on a big pile in the middle of the garden. I can remember that. I remember what happened (afterwards).

"I can remember the hay shed that set right in front of the old house at the lock where my uncle had lived. I remember when we were kids; we'd go up there and play. There was a rope and all kinds of stuff that they had used on the canal.

"Then down by Lockhouse 49 at that lock there was a storage shed there, and they stored hay for the mules. There was water come underneath of 'em - underneath the building. Well, it was like what they called a flume where the water would come under the sheds. The barns set right along the locks. They could throw the hay down out of the shed at the edge of the lock and throw it right onto the boats.

"I can remember next to Lockhouse 49 was a house - the government tore that down (in the early 1960's) - that was the old Fernsner property. Samuel Fernsner run the store there at Four Locks. That's where he and his wife lived.

"The store was located at the next lock down from 49, and it set right along the edge of the lock. I just remember when it was still open before the flood (1936). I remember going down there when I was young and getting candy. They sold canned goods and all kinds of staples, you know.

"I can remember the old chocolate bolsters like a Clark Bar - they called them bolsters. I think you'd get about three or four of them for a penny, you know. They had strips of coconut (candy) like black and green - different flavors. It looked like a slice of bacon - only thing it had streaks of different flavors through it. I do remember those."

A fire in 1862 destroyed the original home occupied by Lewis Fernsner. Fernsner, a carpenter, immediately rebuilt the home, which his son Samuel occupied while operating the store in partnership with Jacob Snyder, who had married Samuel's sister Lela.

With his skill as a carpenter, Lewis Fernsner also repaired canal boats at the drydock at Lock 47 and apparently owned a canal boat according to tax records from 1879 to 1881.

Records also indicate that Fernsner was paid $254 for boat repairs that covered a period of 127 days.
An inventory of the Snyder-Fernsner Store included items such as knitting needles, kerosene, eggs, bread, cigarettes, lye, grain, black powder, scissors, molasses, sugar, coffee, wicks, coal oil, stove polish, baled hay, canned goods and candy.

In the late 1800's the store operated under the name of Smith and Brother. Nora Snyder's History of Clear Spring denotes the store as a "Dealer in Dry Goods, Hats, Caps, boots, shoes, and everything usually kept in a first-class country store."

Taylor added, "I didn't know Mr. Snyder. The only way I can remember Mr. Fernsner was by him living next door, and I remember watching him go down the road to the store to open it. The only time I went down, my father would take me. I never went by myself.

"I don't remember the post office. There was a post office out there at one time. I don't remember that, but I do remember them showing me where the foundation was (next to the Flory House). The old Flory House, there was a cobbler that lived over there - made my father a little pair of shoes - first pair of shoes that he ever wore. I always kept 'em. About once a year I put some Vaseline on them to keep that leather."

Research by Mike Mastrangelo, former ranger for the C & O Canal National Historical Park, indicates that a post office was opened in Four Locks in 1858 and operated until 1865 when it was moved to Clear Spring. In 1878 a post office was re-established in Four Locks and served the community until 1903 when it was moved to Big Spring.

Among the postmasters who served at Four Locks according to Mastrangelo were John D. Prather, James A. Flynn, Edward Smith, Joseph Edward Smith, Allen Brewer, Edward Brewer, Alexander Flory, and Mary Flory.

Another vivid memory of the Four Locks area for Taylor is the Flood of 1936. "I can remember our house (Lockhouse 49) was completely surrounded by water, and we had a boat that we would get in and ride it down to just about the top of the hill at the old Hassett (Thomas) House. My father left his car sit down there.

"There was a wall in front of the old lockhouse. The water was just about two inches from coming up over that wall. Then it would have come into the basement and the kitchen. I remember my father sat up all night. It got up to within two inches, and it started going down. The whole house was surrounded with water. "I can remember seeing barns and everything - cows, I remember seeing a live cow come down - standing on part of a shed. The old Flynn property - that house set right down along the canal below the Hassett property right across from the Fernsner store. I remember seeing it go. It set there, and it bobbed up and down, and finally it just shot right up in the air and down the river it went.

"The old Flory House - I remember after the flood going over there and helping. I guess I was more a hindrance than I was a help shoveling mud out of the first floor. The water had never gotten up to the second floor. Of course they had a basement under it, and that was all submerged in water and halfway up the kitchen walls. They would shovel the mud out, you know."
When Taylor left Four Locks in 1971, he was one of the last residents living there. "I was pretty near the last one out of there. I guess Clarence Baker was the last one out. His mother-in-law and father-in-law - Louis and Mary Meyers - had the furniture store in Hagerstown. They had that (John Hassett House) for a summer home for years." The Hassett home still stands today along the canal northwest of Lock 50.

"Donald Ankeney was also one of the last to leave Four Locks. He lived back in what they called the Neck - the two farms that were surrounded by the river."

It was at Four Locks School, also known as Cedar Grove School, where Taylor went to school for six years. He still has in his possession copies of the Four Locks School News, which was published by the students and edited by Bruce Mason. Appropriately, on the cover of the newspaper is a sketch of the C & O Canal, the catalyst for the birth and demise of the little town of Four Locks.

Snow At Four Locks School Guarantees Bounteous Feast

As an infant Hazel Hart Starliper moved with her family to Four Locks shortly before the C & O ceased operations in 1924.

The daughter of Rudolph and Virgie Hart recalls her father working for the C & O Canal when they moved to a home near Lockhouse 49. "Dad walked to check the canal. He would leave Four Locks and walk to Licking Creek - that was nine miles up and back. He did that every day."

After the canal closed, Hart went to work for Thomas Hassett who lived in a large two-story house at Four Locks, and the Hart family moved into a weatherboard house near the Hassett residence.

Mrs. Starliper attended Four Locks School for eight years whenever she could. "I like to go to school!" she stated emphatically. "I had to stay home so much because my mother was sick. That about killed me because I enjoyed going to school. I really did, and I would have loved to have went to high school!"

She fondly remembers her teacher - Donald Haugh. "When it snowed, he walked from Clear Spring three miles out to Four Locks and taught. There were only six kids that went. My Mother would fix our dinner, and my brother Albert would bring it up. She would fix for all six kids and for Mr. Haugh when it snowed.

"He'd eat butchering dinner every year with is. Mom and them would invite him to dinner, and he would go down there at dinner time" as the Hart home was near the school.

The Garrison Hollow Road resident fondly remembers Christmas at Four Locks School. "The Christmas plays we had - we couldn't stand up there and read off a paper. You memorized every word of it. One year at Christmas we had three different plays. It was a one-room school, and they had like a stage thing up in front. The blackboards went clear across the front and down along (one) side."
As far as recess, "You played whatever the boys played most of the time. We used to get on the chinning bar a lot, and it would tear the skin on your hands."

Mrs. Starliper added, "I done everything at home. I washed, and I ironed, and we washed on a washtub - scrubbed - had to cook. When I was eight years old, I was doing things that grown women done. I was the last girl at home. Mom was sick a lot. We cooked for the men that worked there when they harvested. I had to help do the milking.

"We baked our own bread - we baked twice a week. All 10 of us kids were born at home, and they (mothers) stayed in bed 10 days. They weren't allowed to get up and do nothing. It about killed me that my mother wouldn't let me mix the bread.

"You had a dish pan about this big around (approximately two feet), and you filled it with flour, and then you pulled it back - made a hole in the center of it, and then you made your yeast, and you poured that in the center - in the hole.

"Then you'd just take your hands and keep pulling the flour in, and when you got done, it was a wad of dough. Well, I wanted to do that, and Mom never let me do it. Katherine let me do that (while her mother was sick). Once I did it, I had it do.

"You'd make a pan of hot rolls - you got up early in the morning and make it, and you'd make a pan. Our pan, I'll never forget, made 24 rolls. You'd make a pan full of rolls for dinner, and the rest of it you made into loaves.

"We'd start to wash in the morning. We always washed on a Monday, and we would start early, and sometimes it would be 3 or 4 o'clock before we'd be done washing. In the dead of winter, you went out and hung them clothes up. Mom wouldn't let me do that - it froze my hands.

"You ironed with irons that you sit on top of the cook stove. We had six irons that you put on there 'cause you ironed until it cooled down. Then you had to sit it back and get another one."

She remembers the Snyder-Fernsner store that sat down the hill from their home. "We bought all of our groceries there until the Flood of 1936. He (Sam Fernsner) had anything you needed. It's the only place they had to go.

"He had molasses in a barrel. We used to buy molasses by the quart jar. He wasn't any bigger than me, and he was old. We'd go down there with two or three quart jars to get molasses. Well, in the winter time all he had was this one old stove in there. That stuff would be so cold. Well, he would turn, and then he'd grunt, and he'd turn. Us kids would stand back and instead of trying to help the old man, we'd stand back and make fun.

"He (Hassett) would give my Daddy four pigs in the early spring. My Daddy got $35 a month, and we had nine children. My Daddy bought feed, and of course, you had to stretch it. You couldn't go out there and give them pigs all they wanted. We would feed 'em corn and fatten 'em. Most of the time they weighed around 400 pounds when we got ready to kill 'em. You didn't go to the store and buy beef. It was long years before us kids ever knowed what beef was."
She remembers Hassett "as a nice man. She (Katherine [Hoge] Hassett) was a fantastic woman. She really was. She was pretty, too. Neat! She was tall. She always was neat and clean, and her hair was white as a drippin' snow."

Mrs. Starliper added that Hassett at one time served as a Washington County Commissioner. "I used to go over there and work for Mrs. Hassett besides what I did at home. When he was a County Commissioner, I can remember there was a Charles Wagaman - there was a Judge Wagaman and there were two lawyers. Well, he would have them there for a meal. That's when I'd go over there and help."

At the time she was working for the Hassetts, she regaled in the elegant charm of the old stone house, and ironically, years later she and her husband bought the estate from Mrs. Hassett and lived there - across the road from the five-room weatherboard house where she grew up.
APPENDIX D - I Remember When

Visits To Four Locks Filled With Wonderful Memories

By Frank Woodring

As 80-year-old Helen Jayne Sterling reminisces about her trips to Four Locks to visit her grandparents Samuel and Mary Elizabeth (Brewer) Fernsner, she reflected, "I just loved to go up and be with them."

The Hagerstown area resident's grandfather operated the general store at Lock 48 in partnership with Jake Snyder. "I remember going into the store." Mrs. Sterling stated. She recalls that the store had two doors: "One from the road and one that came in from the lock.

"On the right hand side were these Necco jars with candy in them. The white was peppermint, the pink was the wintergreen, and the brown, of course, was the chocolate, and I loved the chocolate.

"Then on the left hand side they had dry goods and needles and things like that. They had kerosene and coal out in another building."

As she pondered those early visits to Four Locks, Mrs. Sterling added, "I loved the plum pudding that my Grandmother made - it was like a cake. I can remember eating it, usually around Christmas."

Mrs. Sterling remembers her grandfather as "very interested in bookkeeping and reading and things like that. He was pretty well learned. He wasn't too sociable, so to speak. I don't know - Granddad seemed to be somewhat reserved. He was short - had a mustache."

As far as her grandmother, the daughter of Paul Richard and Irene E. Fernsner said, "She was a dear! She was just a very nice person. She was nice to everybody. I can remember Grandmother on Faschnut Day would always make German faschnuts. They were square, and they had two slits in them. They weren't a doughnut; they were a square - supposed to be the German faschnut. She would bake them and put them in a big roaster and put them in the cupboard."

The waters of the Potomac River offered additional motivation for the young lass to visit Four Locks. "I do remember my Grandfather would tie a rope around my waist and let me swim out into the Potomac. He'd be on the shore and wouldn't let me go out too far, of course."

In the winter it was ice skating on the river. "My Dad had skates. I had his skates for a long time. He would take me out on the river and proceed to teach me how to stay up and not fall down. He was a pretty good skater."

She recalls that her grandparents "did have a cow, chickens, and a horse, of course. I think they might have had some turkeys at one time. My Dad loved horses; he did until he died. He had a

Mrs. Sterling remembers the Fernsner house, which was rebuilt in 1872 after the original structure burned, as "a big house. They had eight rooms. I can remember going upstairs (in the winter). It was warm downstairs, but when you went upstairs, it was cold! Then they had the feather tick beds, which you'd snuggle down into, but boy when you got out, it was cold!"

She recalled that her great-grandfather Lewis Fernsner "had two canal boats," one being the Warren Delano. In addition to being a boat owner, Lewis Fernsner worked as a carpenter at the drydock located at Lock 47.

As far as the community of Four Locks, Mrs. Sterling remembers it as "a small place - a lot of people kind of stayed to themselves. The store and everything kept going up until the 30's. After Granddad died, Dad ran the store for a little while - tried to keep it going.

"Of course, my Grandfather was killed by one of Tom Hassett's buck sheep - he was gored. Granddad died in '34."

Being the last of the Fernsner's, Mrs. Sterling still possesses a wealth of family relics relating to Four Locks, which itself stands today as a monument to the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal era, which ended when the canal closed in 1924.
